

SEMINAR

“Rebuilding your professional career in the United States”

- You have significant experience and education and want to get a suitable and satisfying professional job in the U.S.
- You want to increase the probability that your job search will get a response
- You want to build and gain access to professional networks that can help you connect with potential employers
- You are motivated to acquire the skills that will enable you to fully use your education and professional experience in the U.S.

If this sounds like you please join us in a 4-part seminar for immigrant professionals

Part 1: Get Ready!

Saturday April 14, 2012 from 9AM to 1PM
1557 Ogden St., Denver

- ✓ How to achieve your full career potential
- ✓ How to assess your professional readiness, identify gaps and create plans to fill them
- ✓ Evaluating and utilizing the resources available to help you in your career planning
- ✓ Setting realistic goals
- ✓ Building an effective plan to achieve your goals

Part 2 - 4: Build on Part 1. See page 3. Dates to be announced

The seminars are given by leocora founders, Laurence and Elzbieta Nolan.

Elzbieta (Elizabeth) Nolan

Elzbieta is a broadly experienced executive who has built, transformed, and developed multi-national teams of professionals during her career with several Fortune 100 companies (Hewlett Packard, Compaq Computer, Digital Equipment, Unisys) and well as several startups.

Elzbieta has worked in several countries, developing a strong expertise in most aspects of multinational and multicultural management. She successfully overcame cultural barriers working as a young woman in North Africa, and trailblazing the MBA track for other immigrants from Eastern/Central Europe. She has been a very active and committed civic leader, most recently serving a 5-year term as the Arts Commissioner for the City of Boulder, and providing volunteer business support for several organizations in her community.

Elizabeth holds an M.B.A. in Finance/International Business from U.C.L.A. and a M.Sc. in Physics from the Technical University of Warsaw, Poland.

Laurence Nolan

Laurence has developed extensive experience in managing diverse teams of technical talent during his successful management and executive career with several high technology companies (Ericsson, Qualcomm, Motorola, US West). His most recent corporate role was as the Head of a 250+ person R&D Center, where he established a strong record for increasing the organization's competitiveness, innovation and productivity.

Growing up, Laurence had the wonderful experience of living in five countries on three continents and is uniquely skilled at bridging communications gaps between diverse cultures. He has been a trusted mentor and coach to dozens of less experienced professionals.

Laurence holds a M.Sc. E.E. from the University of Illinois and a B.Sc. E.E. from the University of Michigan

“Rebuilding your professional career in the United States”

- Part 1: Get Ready!
 - How to achieve your full career potential
 - How to assess your professional readiness, identify gaps and create plans to fill them
 - Evaluating and utilizing the resources available to help you in your career planning
 - Setting realistic goals
 - Building an effective plan to achieve your goals

- Part 2: Get Set!
 - U.S. Business Culture 101
 - Making your resume an asset
 - Writing an effective cover letter
 - Launching a strategic job search
 - Networking 101

- Part 3: Go!
 - U.S. Business Culture 201
 - Interviewing skills
 - Networking 201

- Part 4: Continuous Improvement
 - Assessing progress; making adjustments
 - Effective career management